INTRODUCTION

Language is a communication tool used by humans to interact with one and another in the form of sound symbols and sign. According to Kushartanti et al (2009:3) said that language is a sound system used by society group to collaborate, communicate and to identify themselves. Nowadays, the existence of language has been developed to be the object of study. Students can learn much more detail about language scientifically through linguistics. One of linguistics aspects is concerned with morphology.

Morphology is a study of the words of language and inflection use form new words. One of morphology scopes is a word formation. The word formation is a creation of the new word. There are process word formation, one of them is compounding. Compounding is one of word formation which is very interesting since it can create a new word whose meaning.

A compound is a new word created by the word formation process of compounding. According to O'grady & Guzman (1996:143) states that compounding is a morphological process in human language the combination of lexical categories (nouns, adjectives, verbs, or prepositions) to create a large word. The combination of some that word creates a meaning of a word which is easier to comprehend, for example, eyeglasses and post office. But there are also some of them which create a new meaning. For example, pigtail (rambut kuncir), the meaning of pigtail itself is not the real meaning that is the tail of a pig.

Compound words are written in different ways. The writing of two words compound in English is not consistent. Then, the writing of hyphenated word is used when a compound has been newly created or not widely used. The last is writing compound in one word. It is used to compound words which have gained a certain currency or permanence.

Compound words are not a simple as it seems. One of example the compound word found in a headline. However, it is shows the important meaning which is expressed by the writer to help the readers to understand the headline. The function of compound words in a headline is to understand a context, because there are many difficulties in understanding the context, like reading a headline of the online newspaper, the reader does not know the word formation of headline

REVIEW OF THE RELATED LITERATURE

Morphology is an analysis of word structure. According to O'grady & Guzman (1996:132), morphology is a system of categories and rules involved in word formation and interpretation. In other words, the study of word formation, including the ways new words are coined in the languages of the world, and the way forms of words are varied depending on how they are used in sentences. It means that morphology is a study of internal structure of words, with the form of lexemes, and with the in which lexemes are formed word formation.

According to Cartairs (2002:59) says compounds are words formed by combining roots, and the much smaller category of phrasal word, that is items that have the internal structure of phrases but function syntactically as word. The last Katamba mentions that compound word is a word made up of at least two bases which can occur elsewhere as independent word (1993:291).

Moreover, types of compound words are Endocentric and Exocentric compound. Endocentric compound is a compound which the meaning can be denoted its head. O'grady and Guzman (1996: 154) endocentrix is a compound that identifies the general class which the meaning of entire word belongs. Such as dog food is a type of food. And a cave man is a type of man. While, exocentric is is compound which the meaning does not follow from its part' meaning. O'grady and Guzman (1996: 154) says exocentric is a compound does not follow from the meaning of its parts in this way.

The meaning is message contains in a word. Ullman (1972: 81) says every compound contains words which are arbitrary and opaque, without any connection between sound and sense, and other which are at least to some degree motivated and transparent. Based on theory Ullman the researcher classiffy the transparent meaning and opaque meaning.
